"Today's announcement about AIG's deconsolidation of Corebridge Financial is a major achievement, which reflects the culmination of a series of well-planned and deliberate strategic decisions which will position AIG for the future as a leading global Property and Casualty insurer," said Peter Zaffino, Chairman and CEO of AIG. "I am very proud of our colleagues at AIG and Corebridge for all they contributed over the past several years, along with the focus and discipline with which they executed on the separation of the Life & Retirement business. Leading up to their successful IPO in 2022, we are very pleased that Corebridge Financial developed high-quality partnerships with Blackstone and BlackRock, and recently we announced Nippon Life's intent to become an approximately 20% strategic investor, positioning Corebridge Financial for profitable long-term growth and industry leadership."

Mr. Zaffino will continue as Chairman of the Corebridge Financial Board of Directors which has been reduced to 12 members. AIG owns approximately 48.35% of Corebridge Financial's common stock.
