NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Oct. 23, 2024-- American International Group, Inc. (NYSE: AIG) today announced plans to consolidate and expand its Atlanta-area footprint with the relocation of its Alpharetta and Buckhead operations to a new innovation hub at 2002 Summit Boulevard Northeast in Brookhaven, Georgia. The Company is designing a collaborative workspace that will accommodate current employees and more than 600 new local hires.

AIG is expanding its operations in Atlanta and hiring local talent for various roles across underwriting, claims, operations, data engineering and AI. The new hub will enable these co-located teams to incubate digital capabilities, test new processes, and collaborate more seamlessly across functions, accelerating innovation to promote growth and drive scale for AIG's core businesses.

"This investment is part of our commitment to continue to enhance our expertise to help our clients and partners navigate complex and emerging risks, while building additional capabilities for the future."

AIG's investment in the 180,000-square-foot facility will triple its current office space to accommodate over 1,000 colleagues in Atlanta, including the creation of more than 600 new roles over the next five years. The Company plans to move into the LEED Gold certified space in 2026.

Georgia Governor Brian Kemp stated he looks forward to the new innovation hub's long-lasting, positive impacts. "AIG's decision to grow their footprint here in Georgia is just the latest confirmation that we have what businesses want and are leveraging those assets to their fullest so we can bring new opportunity to all parts of the state," said Governor Kemp.

"With the Atlanta innovation hub, we are enhancing our data and digital capabilities and recruiting talent with highly sought-after expertise," said Claude Wade, Executive Vice President, Chief Digital Officer and Global Head of Business Operations & Claims, AIG.
