

AIG Releases 2015 Corporate Citizenship Report

July 21, 2016 4:21 PM ET

NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Jul. 21, 2016-- American International Group, Inc. (NYSE:AIG) today announced the release of its 2015 Corporate Citizenship Report, which showcases the company's governance, environmental, and social performance, as well as its commitment to long-term sustainability.

In the report's opening letter, Peter Hancock, AIG President and Chief Executive Officer, wrote, "Living up to our responsibility as a good corporate citizen means making a positive contribution to the communities in which AIG has a business presence." He added that it "also means conducting our business thoughtfully, ethically, and with a concern for the impact we have on society at large."

The report is organized by AIG's Vision, Mission, and Values, the guideposts for how the company's corporate responsibility initiatives create value for AIG, its customers, business partners, employees, and shareholders as they contribute to the growth of sustainable, prosperous communities.

Highlights from the report include:

- A sustainable investment strategy - investing more than $2 billion in wind, solar, geothermal, and hydroelectric projects worldwide.
- Environmental responsibility - reducing our carbon footprint and promoting sustainable business practices across the company.
- Entrepreneurship and empowerment - continuing to deliver world-class products and services to low-income populations through microinsurance, including a partnership with Blue Marble, a microinsurance venture incubator.
- Diversity and inclusion - supporting opportunities to cultivate diversity among employees, clients, brokers, agents, and suppliers to develop creative solutions to complex business challenges.
- Corporate giving - striving to make a difference in the communities where AIG has a business presence by partnering with charitable organizations in three primary areas: safety, security, and disaster relief.
